

Stability aspects for absence of arbitrage conditions

Martin Schweizer

ETH Zurich

Abstract / Resumo:

We study how absence of arbitrage conditions react to changes of the underlying probability measure. This is important if one considers robustness aspects where the initial model is perhaps not exactly known, but only comes from a family of measures. We present some preliminary work concerning the robustness of integrability properties for martingale measures.