

Financial tools for the French-Brazilian cooperation in Mathematics

Philippe Michelon¹

¹ Consulat général de France à Rio de Janeiro

Nowadays, research is international or is not. It is therefore very important for researchers (and their governments) to have strong and variate international collaborations. Nevertheless, international research is much more expensive than old times research, which was more local. In this talk, we will make a survey of the financial tools for supporting French-Brazilian cooperation in research in the Rio de Janeiro and Espirito Santo states.